"Answer The Question" was built on the graph in the final question of this exam paper. My first decision was to make the volume of the choir's singing follow the curve of the graph (with 0 being loudest and 1.5 being silent) - so it begins at its loudest, decreases to near silence, crescendos again to its equal-loudest point at about three minutes, and fades away over the last section.

On each of the test outs there are just a couple requirements and a couple failure conditions. As long as you do the rescue and don't do something to fail, you pass. Generally, if you do it ugly and slow (except on the deep water submerged test, which is timed) you will pass. Take things step by step on the written test.
