Information: Nuclear reactions and ionizing radiation A nuclear reaction is a change in the composition of the nucleus of an atom. This is not normally considered a chemical reaction, and does not depend on what molecule the atom might be in. There are three types of nuclear reactions: fusion, fission, and radioactivity. Fusion

Nuclear fusion and nuclear fission are different types of reactions that release energy due to the presence of high-powered atomic bonds between particles found within a nucleus. In fission, an atom is split into two or more smaller, lighter atoms. Fusion, in contrast, occurs when two or more smaller atoms fuse together, creating a larger, heavier atom.

Both fission and fusion are nuclear processes by which atoms are altered to create energy, but what is the difference between the two? Simply put, fission is the division of one atom into two, and fusion is the combination of two lighter atoms into a larger one. They are opposing processes, and therefore very different.

The main difference between nuclear fission and nuclear fusion is that a nuclear reaction in which a heavy nucleus is broken into smaller nuclei, by releasing neutrons and energy, is called nuclear fission. A process in which two or more lighter atoms combine to create a heavy nucleus, is called nuclear fusion.

Lesson 45: Fission & Fusion Start talking to someone about nuclear energy, and they'll probably think of two things: nuclear bombs, and the towers of a nuclear power plant like on the Simpsons. Most people view nuclear energy as something to be afraid of, but like most things, once you understand it a lot of the fear disappears.

Description:With the Fission Demonstration, students gain a better understanding of nuclear fission and fusion.Students are able to visualize and model what is meant by nuclear fission. By extension, this experiment is a useful analogy to the generation of electricity via nuclear reactors.

Nuclear fission is a nuclear reaction in which the nucleus of an atom splits into smaller parts (lighter nuclei).; Nuclear fusion is a nuclear reaction in which two or more atomic nuclei collide at a very high energy and fuse together into a new nucleus; This is the main difference. Whether the reaction is exothermic or not, it is dependent on the binding energy of resulting nuclei.
