Miracle of the Rose - Wikipedia

Miracle of the Rose is the most autobiographical of Jean Genet's writings. It is also the most thoroughly erotic, though—since the competition is pretty stiff—not necessarily the most sexually outrageous. Composed in La Sante Prison during the early Forties, right after completing the masterful Our Lady of the Flowers, Miracle lacks to a notable, if hardly disabling, degree its antecedent ...

Spotlight on ... Jean Genet Miracle of the Rose (1943) 'The prison is the double of life. Not so much that prison mirrors or replicates life; it is a simulated environment whose verisimilitude is independent of any 'liberated' life. Prison is the actualized space upon which the outside world is contingent.
