Modern history, the modern period or the modern era, is the linear, global, historiographical approach to the time frame after post-classical history. Modern history can be further broken down into periods: The early modern period began approximately in the early 16th century; notable historical milestones included the European Renaissance, the Age of Discovery, and the Protestant Reformation.

In analytic philosophy, the term natural kind identifies a grouping of entities that always share particular qualities, independently of human knowledge of the entities or their qualities. A natural kind labels a "real" structure of the "natural world", not an "artificial" result of human reasoning, by which reality is described, explained and categorised.
