Only The Animals Ceridwen Dovey

Reviews. "I have just finished a remarkable book, Only the Animals, by South African-born Australian writer Ceridwen Dovey. In 10 self-contained yet emotionally and philosophically connected stories, the souls of 10 animals tell us about their lives and deaths, often as a result of human conflict such as war, always as a result...

Only the Animals » Ceridwen Dovey

Go ape: Only the Animals by Ceridwen Dovey. The first correspondence is between Peter and Frau Oberndorff, the wife of the animal trainer at the Hamburg Zoological Gardens. It concerns a little female ape, who is being schooled as a fit companion for Peter. Again, readers may recall that Kafka ends his story with her.

"Only the Animals" highlights the arbitrary valuations of life on earth. Animals serve as beasts of burden, military resources, companions, experiments or characters in their own right.

Ceridwen Dovey's 'Only the Animals' - The New York Times

Only the Animals Review: What drew me to Ceridwen Dovey's short story collection Only the Animals was its unusual premise – 10 stories narrated by animals that had died as a result of human conflict. While inevitably moved by these stories, some I found deeply unsettling. Read more >> Review: 'Only the Animals,' by Ceridwen Dovey ...

Ceridwen Dovey's award-winning Only the Animals is comprised of astonishing interventions and a multiplicity of voices that powerfully re-create and re-focalise narratives of the past. Each of the ten stories is typically recalled, posthumously, by the 'soul' of an animal affected—and ultimately killed—by human violence.

Jo Langdon reviews "Only the Animals" by Ceridwen Dovey ...

Thus far, though, it's another of the works longlisted from the prize that has most captivated my attention: Ceridwen Dovey's intriguing, sometimes demanding, but very rewarding Only the Animals. Some reviewers have referred to Only the Animals as a novel, but it really isn't, and doesn't purport to be.

Review: "Only the Animals" by Ceridwen Dovey | Global Comment

In visual art, the compulsion to surrender to the belief you are falling either into or out of an image is known as trompe-l'oeil, French for 'deceive the eye'. Ceridwen Dovey's story collection Only the Animals encourages a comparable state of joyous deception.

A joyous deception: Ceridwen Dovey's Only the Animals ...

In "Only the Animals," Ceridwen Dovey asks a slightly different question: Why write about, or even as, animals? From Kafka to Woolf to Coetzee, writers have tried to jump the species gap ...
