A dual-review of 'Evening Man' and 'Ooga-Booga.' Yet more evidence that honest reportage from the disaffected has more critical force than puritanical censorship: it's impossible to read this and feel anything but disgust for Seidel, his world (i.e., the ultra-rich), and the world surrounding that world, in which everything is for sale, for the purposes of sex and hedonism.

The poetry, almost an afterthought, is assumed to surge spontaneously from the life. Seidel is therefore a triumphant outsider in American poetry. He does not give readings (he "loathes" them), though one may hear excellent recordings of poems from his new book Ooga-Booga at www.frederickseidel.com.
