Join editor Jessica Hagedorn (Toxicology, Dogeaters) and other contributors for an evening of mystery and murder from Manila, one of the most intense, congested, and overpopulated cities in the world and the ideal, torrid setting for the best in crime fiction. Also featuring an excerpt from the movie thriller Graceland by writer-director Ron Morales.

Manila Noir: Jessica Hagedorn, Gina Apostol, Ron Morales ...

Manila provides the ideal, torrid setting for an Akashic Noir series volume. It's where the rich rub shoulders with the poor, where five-star hotels coexist with informal settlements, where religious zeal coexists with superstition, and where politics is often synonymous with celebrity and corruption.

Editions of Manila Noir by Jessica Hagedorn - Goodreads

review 1: Every story grips you by the neck and doesn't let go. Though some of the stories aren't "Manila" enough, every story delivers a great noir. Among my favorites were: Rosario Cruz-Lucero's Human Rights, Lourde De Veyra's story about the two meth addict in Quezon City, Lynsey Tenorio's Aviary, Jessica Hagedorn's Old Money and, ofcourse, Thirteen Stations by Kajo and Budgette Tan which ...
