Tom Perrotta occupies a rare and privileged place in American letters: the literary writer with popular appeal. He writes serious, thoughtful realism, but his stories have mass appeal: his novels Election and Little Children have both become Academy Award-nominated films, the film version of The Abstinence Teacher is in production, and The Leftovers has recently been picked up as an HBO series.

The Millions: Middle Men: Stories by Jim Gavin

I recognize these characters and identify with them. I especially recommend "Bewildering Decisions in Times of Mercantile Terror" and "Middle Men" for their explorations of the resonance and impact of love, relationships, and grief. I would class Jim Gavin with Flannery O'Connor and J.D. Salinger.
