I make this cookies every week! They are great for a mid morning/afternoon snack. I always replace sugar or brown sugar with panela (unrefined whole cane sugar) and instead of only raisins I add a whole cup of a nut mix (made by me) with cajú, sunflower seeds, quinoa (boiled first around 20 minutes), raisins, chestnuts or sesame seeds.

Made these this morning and they came out beautifully. We're huge lemon fans and I didn't think the batter tasted very lemony, so I added a bit extra-first I doubled the juice and the zest, but even that did not seem like enough, so I put in the juice from one big lemon and the zest from that lemon and then some extract, and finally a few packets of "true lemon" because I was ...

A cake with a little ganache. Or maybe a little too much. Nope. Not possible. Not sure there's such a thing as too much ganache. I like to eat it by the spoonful, but by the cakefull is even better. The cake inside is chocolate. And actually the recipe for the chocolate cake in this post is not the actual cake in these pictures. Why? Well, while it looks nice enough, it just wasn't satisfied.
