According to the Free software movement's leader, Richard Stallman, the main difference is that by choosing one term over the other (i.e. either "open source" or "free software") one lets others know about what one's goals are: "Open source is a development methodology; free software is a social movement." Nevertheless, there is significant overlap between open source software and free software.

Whether they're working for you, or you're working for them, people continually seek approval for their actions so they respond very well to affection. And if you keep giving it to them, they'll eventually crave it from you. From Isaacson's biography: "Jobs could seduce and charm people at will, and he liked to do so. People such as (former Apple CEOs) Amelio and Sculley allowed ...
