Man Crazy is told from the point of view of a young woman, Ingrid Boone, writing to her therapist about her life.

Man Crazy - Wikipedia

Normally, I admire Joyce Carol Oates and her willingness to tackle the darker sides of the human experience. Over the course of her novels (I think I've read about half), she has looked through the lens of past and present, working class and elite, boringly normal and crazy, playing with different genres and styles.

Reading Man Crazy made me want to take a long, hot shower to wash away the sheer unpleasantness of Joyce Carol Oates' fictional world. And Ingrid Boone, Oates' narrator, suffers far more than I did -- she literally itches with the creepiness that surrounds her, scratching at her own skin until it oozes and bleeds.
