Net Smart is an interesting take on the potential of the Internet. It is optimistic in its outlook of what we as humans can do together through the web. But Rheingold also points out that each person has the responsibility to participate and contribute to the online communities, because what people do on the internet and what they use it for ...

Net Smart: How to Thrive Online by Howard Rheingold

If Net Smart is, as it claims to be, a how-to book, where are the insights and higher-level perspectives? Where are the summaries? Where are the summaries? Perhaps I'm being unfair, because there is a summary towards the end of the book of "five literacies in a nutshell".
