Mr Chartwell Rebecca Hunt

This is a clever and funny book about a serious topic. Churchill named his depression a black dog and Rebecca Hunt personifies the dog. Mr Chartwell is a very large (human sized) black labrador who can speak and interact. His job is with those who have depression and he takes his job seriously. The story is set over 5 days in July 1964.

Mr. Chartwell: A Novel: Rebecca Hunt: 9781400069408 ...

The conceit at the heart of Mr. Chartwell - the re-envisioning of Winston Churchill's famous bouts of depression as actual visits from a huge, slobbery black dog - is not cutesy or trite, as the book jacket blurb might lead one to fear, but clever and disarming. Rebecca Hunt engages the topic of depression in an inventive way, and the result is not a grim dose of hard truth but a playful ...

Book Review - Mr. Chartwell - By Rebecca Hunt - The New ...

“‘No,’ Mr. Chartwell said testily. ‘I depress them.’ ... ‘Churchill is a regular. He names his depression the Black Dog.’” And so Rebecca Hunt takes an analogy expressed by the great statesman and turns it into a real, living character in her novel Mr. Chartwell. The black dog is truly a monstrous dog that visits, settles in and ...

Mr. Chartwell | Rated Reads

In "Mr. Chartwell," Rebecca Hunt takes that metaphorical description and makes it literal. Churchill's depression is literally a big black dog who gives his name variously as Mr. Chartwell (Chartwell being the name of Churchill's home estate) and Black Pat. When widowed and lonely young librarian Esther Hammerhans advertises for a boarder, she ...
